Liebig's Law Of The Minimum

Justus von Liebig (1807-1882), the Father of the Fertilizer Industry, developed the Law of Minimum, which states that...

"The growth of plants is limited by the plant nutrient present in the smallest quantity, all others being present in adequate amounts".

In other words, if a certain nutrient needed by the plant is insufficient, the relative higher amounts of the other nutrients are not taken up by the plant and are wasted. Only a fertilizer with its nutrients balanced in full adequate supply will allow the plant to uptake the nutrients completely.
